COURSE DESCRIPTION
Taught in English, this course aims to introduce and analyze East Asian international relations and foreign policy, with a focus on Northeast Asian states including China, Japan, and the Koreas. We will examine the psychological sources of conflict and cooperation, assessing competing explanations for key security and political events in the region such as the rise of China, Japan's constitution, and North Korean nuclear policy. Readings are drawn from international relations theory, foreign policy, and political and social psychology.

CLAC SECTION
For Whom?
Anyone previously or currently enrolled in POLS 5480, whose Chinese/Japanese/Korean speaking skills are at the intermediate level or higher, and who would like more opportunities to communicate in the language.

About What?
In this compact one-hour-a-week class, you will discuss in Chinese/Korean/Japanese short selections of readings linked to the POLS 5480 class.
